WORKING ON A CASH BASIS.

(From Saturday Evening Post.)

New York, Boston and Philadelphia have three times the population of Chicago, but the Chicago post-office cashes more money orders than the post-offices of the other three cities combined. This is largely due to the great mail-order business at Chicago. One of the mail-order houses there recently declared an extra dividend which, at the current price of its stock, is worth eighteen million dollars to its shareholders. At the current price, insiders in this house have created for themselves a total profit of seventy millions in five years in five years the volume of sales nearly doubled, and last year the net profits amounted to almost twelve per cent of the gross sales.

We write this for the consideration of country merchants who are opposed to the parcels-post. The size, profits and rapid growth of the mail order business seem to show that, to meet the competition of that business with success, the country merchant must look beyond any such feeble protection as high express rates may now afford. The figures we have quoted suggest how feeble that protection is.

Buying in quantities for cash and sending for cash constitutes two large elements in the success of the mail-order business. Why may not the country merchants, by co-operating do both? The credit system is one of the great handicaps upon retail

Baptist Sunday School Organized

First Meeting in New Church—Call Extended To Rev. Gilman Parker.

In the new Baptist church now nearing completion the first meeting was held in the Sunday school room, Thursday night. Attendance was good and the spirit was excellent.

Among other business transacted was the organization of the Sunday school with the following officers: Superintendent, Chester Barlow; assistant, A. H. Rudd; primary superintendent, Mrs. M. J. Fletcher; home department superintendent, Mrs. Ida Avery; sec., Mrs. J. P. Sanders; assistant, Carrie Falconer; temperance secretary, Mrs. N. J. Falconer; treasurer, Wayne Wagner; librarian, Routh Sanders; chorister, Lenore Lewis; organist, Ethel Weaver.

A full day is planned for tomorrow, with the Sunday school at 9:45 a. m., preaching at 11 and 7:30 by Rev. W. H. Gibson. At 6:30 a Baptist Young People's Union will be organized.

The church extended a call to Rev. Gilman Parker, of Corning, California, to the pastorate. Mr. Parker is an able minister and was formerly corresponding secretary of the Oregon Baptist Convention and general mission superintendent of the state work.

The young people of the church extend a cordial and hearty invitation to all to participate with them in a New Year's watch night service, tonight.

W. H. GIBSON, Acting Pastor.

John Bare Paroled From Penitentiary

Given His Liberty Wednesday and Will Reside in Eagle Valley.

John Bare was granted a parole Wednesday by Acting Governor Bowersman, and was released from the penitentiary the same afternoon, and joined his devoted wife who was waiting for him in Salem.

By the terms of the parole Bare is prohibited from residing in Wallowa, Union or Multnomah counties; must support his family and refrain from the use of intoxicating liquors.

He will go first to his brother's home in Eagle Valley, Baker county, to recuperate his health which is very poor at present.

CHURCH SERVICES.

Methodist church: Services next Sunday as usual. Subject of morning sermon, "A Motto for the New Year." Evening theme, "The Irreparable Past and the Available Future." All cordially invited.

It is now the O-W. R. & N. company.

Coyote Blocks Way To Kenville's Door

Paradise Man's Experience On His Return Home From Christmas Visit.

J. S. Kenville of Paradise, who was in Enterprise the week before Christmas, had an experience with a coyote on his return home about which he writes under date of December 25 as follows:

Editor: I have a true coyote experience to the public. While I was in Enterprise my boy one day was just outside the house yard picket fence when a coyote came for him. He ran to the house, got a rifle and shot the beast.

We had a bid out for Christmas dinner today, and I just arrived from Enterprise to the house of our host, in time for the dinner, my folks meeting me there. We reached home tonight just at dark, and as we drove up to the yard gate, our dog, which was with us, began barking. There stood a coyote about 10 feet away and between us and the house. My boy lighted a match and threw it at the coyote, which snarled and bit at it. Finally the dog worried the coyote to one side of the yard and the boy made a dash into the house, got the rifle and shot the beast.

So I would advise all people to take warning for your children and yourselves. I never had much faith in the coyote scare, but when one of them gets in my yard between me and my house, and at a distance of 10 feet of me keeps pacing back and forth showing no fear, it looks bad.

Every word of this is true.
Yours truly,
J. S. KENVILLE.

"Mad Stone" Cure Only Superstition

Get Reputation By Being Applied To People Who Were Immune.

By W. H. Lytle, State Veterinarian. The old superstition that a stone known as a "mad stone" would cure or prevent rabies in people is without foundation and was only made possible of belief by the fact that only a certain percent of people bitten will develop the disease. Hence when this stone was applied to certain people's wounds that would not have developed the disease had they not been treated at all, it received a false reputation. As an immediate precaution all wounds inflicted should be allowed to bleed freely, they then should be cauterized with a strong acid or a hot iron. By the tying of a ligature on a pendant portion of the body and causing it to remain on some ten or more hours until the limb has swollen, has been known to prevent the infection; this should be attempted only in animals such as horses. People should always be given the Pasteur treatment which is known to prevent the disease.

The heads of all supposed rabid animals should be cut off and expressed, packed in a box together with a letter giving the circumstances surrounding the case, to Dr. Calvin S. White, room 502 Dekum building, Portland, Oregon. This should always be done where an animal has bitten people or other animals as by an expert examination of the brain of the supposed rabid animal it can be definitely determined whether the animal was actually rabid. This will give ample time for such persons as may have been bitten to take the treatment to prevent the development of rabies.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Langston of Alder Slope entertained a number of friends on December 22, in honor of their first marriage anniversary.

Just Like Good Old Summer Time

Cattle and Sheep Grazing Over Innaha Hills—Merry Christmas Time.

Innaha, Dec. 25.—We have had a few fine showers the past week while it was snowing on the high hills and probably all over the outside country. Cattle and sheep grazing over the hills like in the summer time; nobody feeding any yet. Innaha against the world for climate; it's climate it all the time!

Dan Clemons is recovering slowly from a severe attack of rheumatism.

Peter Boudan and son passed through town Thursday on their way to Idaho on business.

Elmer Brumbach has gone to the Buttes to spend the holidays with his mother and sisters.

J. A. Murphy has been laid up for a week with a lame back, but is some better now.

C. E. Lewis butchered some fine porkers last week. Innaha people are getting tired of buying 27 cent bacon.

S. E. Young and E. B. McGarry are cutting a fine lot of wood for next summer. They are taking the advantage of the cool, shady days, but it takes elbow grease and beans just the same.

Everybody enjoyed him or herself at the dance in the city hall Friday night.

The Xmas tree at the Innaha school house was a fine success. Lots of presents and candy for everybody and all went home rejoicing.

RUFF AND REDDY.

ELK MOUNTAIN.

Elmer McFetridge was visiting his brother, Millard, during the past week.

Miss Iva Loftus spent holiday week with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. James Daily and Elmer McFetridge went to the Chico dance Friday night.

L. Cramer was on the mountain Friday looking for horses that are still on the range.

A Happy New Year to all.
